Our Method

We use a personal knowledge assessment procedure, in order to identify where action is needed through courses and training programs. The training may take place in different directions. First it is useful to fill limits and difficulties where staff are not properly trained. In the case of an already established situation, the implementation or improvement of new equipment, processes or new projects requires specific training to make them efficient and performing. Training regarding prevention is essential for the risk assessment of systems and products. This might be necessary because of innovations or new equipment for which additional knowledge is needed, but also to improve the expertise level where reality seems to be already solid and notions completely absorbed. A dynamic training, in fact, enables the company to be more efficient and productive, through those individual micro-improvements which will then have a macro-impact on large numbers, ensuring significant improvements.
